Ambassador Name: Alara Nazlı BUHARALI

The Middle East is a geographical area where different, conflicting cultures and forces are trying to live together. This situation makes peace and balance a fragile climate where a minor change results in big issues and difficulties. Iraq as a part of this geographical area has its share of this chaos. Today our people are struggling with various problems caused by the delicate balance and external powers. From the post-war refugees' vulnerable economic and social conditions in a foreign society to the embargos kept on enforcing even after the war. The region and Iraq nation are in the same conditions. The common belief is that the hot war is the tough part, however the main challenge is to rearrange and to provide stability and sustainability of the new era. We strongly believe that the only way to bring permanent solutions and create peace and balance in the region is to focus on the crucial post war problems such as the situation of the refugees, economic poverty and scarcity of nutritious and medical resources. By the end of this conference we expect to gather attention, to discuss and find solutions for the people and nations who are suffering from those issues and failure of pacification especially in the Middle East.
